The Chicago Tribune.

Sunday Morning, September 26, 1875.

At the New York Gold Exchange on Saturday greenbacks closed at $51@$52.

The great Wad will case, now trying at Detroit, bids fair to result in a tragedy if scenes like that of yesterday are continued. Mr. Wad Dexter, Chicago's representative in the trial, has given the legal gentlemen on the other side to understand that he is responsible, both in and out of court, for any remarks he may find it necessary to make; and now all that is required on the part of his adversaries to find out whether he is in earnest is to "knock the chip off his shoulder."

The September report of the Commissioner of Agriculture shows that the corn crop, notwithstanding the losses by the overflow of bottom lands, and in spite of the unusual lateness of maturing, is likely to be one of the best we have ever had. As we predicted at the time of the heavy rains, there has been fully as much benefit to the crop on the low lands as there was damage in the high lands. The average reports from the various States show an improvement of 1 per cent over the prospects during the last month.

The octro is a sort of customs tax imposed upon nearly all wares brought through the gates of Paris and other large cities of France. It is levied on food, fuel, building-materials, etc. The yield of the Paris octro is over $20,000,000 a year. The force which collects it consists of 1,000 paid inspectors and a number of managers and clerks. The whole cost of collecting the octro is only $1,200,000, or scarcely 5 per cent of the revenue. These are somewhat remarkable figures. We have, except on the incredible hypothesis that Senator Monroe has made a mistake, "the best civil service on the face of the planet," but it would not be inadvisable to study the methods of collecting the Paris octro in order to introduce some slight improvement into our nearly perfect system, and so reduce its cost to the public 50 or 75 per cent.

The second Government Commission appointed by President Grant to examine and report upon the condition of the Custom-House building in this city have made a report, which is now made public. They substantially agree with the verdict rendered by The Tribune some weeks ago. They see no reason why work should not be resumed on the building immediately. The defects, they declare, can be easily remedied. There has been no material settling of the building, in their opinion, although the ground is not as firm as it should be. This, they think, can be remedied by putting on more concrete where voids appear, and by reducing the weight above the second story. The material is sufficient for the purposes of the structure, and no change is necessary. This report, it will be perceived, differs widely from that of the nephew of his uncle the Bishop. It is none the less trustworthy on that account.

An important decision was given yesterday by Judge DRUMMOND in the bill for injunction to prevent the performance of a play here called "The Two Orphans." The Judge held that the translator of a play from the French was entitled to a copyright here in a double sense, both as translator and also in the eye of the law as author, both by the statute and the common law. The fact, also, that the parties were mistaken in their rights ought not to redound to their prejudice. An injunction was therefore granted restraining the production of Mr. JACKSON's translation, but no decision was given as to the character of the English translation which, it was claimed, had been made before the American version. The law on the subject is quite involved, and the counsel on the two sides of the case varied entirely in their understanding of it. Here is a good text for CHARLES BRADE to select as a subject for one of his philippic.

The Chicago produce markets were generally strong on Saturday. Meats were active and 20@25c per bri higher, closing at $2.00 each, and $2.20@22.25 for October. Lead was quiet and $4@5c per 100 lbs higher, closing at $2.40 each or 20c October, and $1.20 seller the year. Meats were in fair request and farmer, at 8@8@10c for shoulders, 12@12@15c for short ribs, and 12@15c for short clears. Highwines were active and 10c lower, at $1.15@16c per gallon. Lake freights were moderately active, at 20c for corn to Buffalo. Flour was in fair demand and easier on new. Wheat was more active and 10c higher, closing at $1.07@1.08 each and $1.05 for October. Corn was in good demand and easier on new, but closed weak at 55@56c cash, and 53@54c for October. Oats were more active and irregular, closing at 34@35c for September, and 32@33c for October. Rye was quiet, at 74@75c. Barley was steady, closing at $1.01@1.02 for September, and $1.02 for October. Hogs were in active demand and were stronger, closing 10c higher than on Friday morning. Sales were chiefly at $7.75@8.00. The cattle market was active and steadier. Sheep were inactive and nominal, at $3.00@3.25. One hundred dollars in gold would buy $116.50 in greenbacks at the close.

The aerial ladder disaster in New York a few days since, by which three firemen were instantly killed, is one of the results of a corrupt ring operation. The jury of inquest upon these victims brought in the following verdict:

We, the jury, find that the deceased men, WILLIAM H. NASH and others, came to their death by the breaking of the serial ladder while experimenting or practicing the art of fire-fighting. The cause of the accident was the failure of the ladder being made of inferior wood and its construction faulty, and we emphatically condemn the Board of Fire Commissioners for not submitting the latter to both a scientific and practical test before allowing them to be used by the Fire Department. And we most decidedly condemn the officers of the Fire Department for not understanding the use of these aerial ladders now owned by the city by our Fire Department.

These ladders were foisted upon the Fire Department of New York City at a large expense, through the operations of a ring and corruption-money. At the first practical test one of them snapped like a reed and killed the three men who were at work upon it. The disaster will prevent their further use in that city; but the results of it ought not to stop there. Some one should be held responsible for the murder of these men.

THE FRIGHTFUL SPECTRE: SPECIE PAYMENTS.

The first thing that the average inflationist will exclaim when specie payments are proposed, is: "The thing is impossible; there ain't gold enough in the country; where are you going to get the gold to redeem the seven hundred millions of currency and to pay all the debts, public and private, of the people?" and this nonsensical tract is repeated day after day in newspapers, and in letters of men professing to understand finance and trade, and in speeches of men holding the high offices of Senators, Representatives, Governors,—and by aspirants even to the office of President. There are a score of men now advertising themselves for the Presidency by repeating the statement we have quoted, and other equally absurd nonsense.

If specie payments were renewed, the need of gold in the transaction of business would not be materially increased. Gold is now only needed to pay customs-duties, balances in the foreign trade, and interest on bonds held abroad. We import a given value of foreign goods, and pay for them with our own productions. If the latter fall short, we balance the account with coin and bullion, which is as much a natural product of this country as is petroleum or coal. In several lines of production we have almost a monopoly. We have cotton, tobacco, petroleum, breadstuffs, and provisions. These are among the necessities of life, and command a market always. Unfortunately, we have not yet seen the folly of prohibiting the exportation of our surplus manufactures by a high tariff, and are therefore deprived of the profit of that trade, and have to send forward the product of the gold and silver mines to make up the deficiency.

We have use, therefore, now for gold to pay these balances and foreign interest, and to pay on imports. The gold used to pay duties is paid out again to meet interest on the debt, so the same amount of gold answers for both purposes. If specie payments were resumed, the amount of gold actually needed, if obtainable on demand, might be slightly increased to the extent of supplying some persons with a few coins to be carried as pocket-pieces, but not otherwise. The whole domestic business of the country would be carried on as now in currency, and by checks and bills of exchange. Grain dealers coming to Chicago to purchase breadstuffs and provisions, instead of bringing coin, would bring sight drafts and bills of exchange on New York; would deposit them in a Chicago bank, and pay for the purchases with checks on the bank. The drafts and bills of exchange would be forwarded to New York to the credit of the Chicago bank, to be drawn against in like manner to pay debts in New York. This whole transaction, though on a gold basis, would not require the handling or transfer of a single piece of coin. Multiply this transaction indefinitely, and nearly the entire business of the country would be conducted without the actual transfer of coin. But every transaction then would have the same standard of value. Then a draft on New York would have the same value when presented for payment as it had when drawn. Banks in Chicago now give gold drafts on New York and elsewhere. Any one in Chicago can get bank drafts payable in gold in New York, but the cost of these drafts vary every hour in the day. If we had specie payments, the cost of a draft payable in coin would be the same every day, and that too, without the handling or transfer of coin.

The inflation advocates assume that if specie payments were resumed every man having currency would demand coin for it. What is the man to do with his coin when he gets it? Where is the gain of drawing gold?

He can't sell it except at par for paper. Is he to carry it in his person, or hide it away? If he have any use for it, or if he have no immediate use for it, it must find its way back to the bank again for safe keeping. The difference with him in case of specie payments will be that when he wants gold for a particular purpose he can get it; and, so long as the paper is of equal value with gold, he will use the latter because it is the more convenient and less cumbersome commodity. Even if he have to make a payment in coin he will do so by check on the bank, which check the paper will deposit to his own credit.

The circulation of National Bank notes will be protected, as now, by the deposit of bonds, with this difference: For every $50 of bank note in circulation there is deposited a bond worth $103 to $105 in gold.

When a bank now fails to redeem its notes, the bonds are sold for $103 in gold; and the bank notes are redeemed with greenbacks, the bank retaining the difference. If we had specie payments, and a bank should fail to pay its notes, the bond would be sold for gold, and the gold would be paid to the note-holder. In point of fact, the means to redeem the National Bank notes would be always on hand, and the redemption would be in coin instead of fluctuating paper, as now. For various purposes, if the greenbacks were redeemable on demand for coin, they would be preferable to coin. They can be mailed, as coin cannot; they can be sent by express at nominal cost for transportation. All persons traveling would take greenbacks in place of coin, and money kept in dwellings would be in paper, which can be held in small bulk and easily concealed, in preference to the heavy and somewhat bulky coin.

The local purposes for which coin are needed are so few, and are of such an exclusive business character, that ninety-nine-hundredths of it would be placed on deposit in banks or elsewhere, while the greenbacks and the other paper currency would be as much the general medium of exchange as now. The aggregate amount of gold needed for all purposes would be but little, if any, greater, as there is now in the country, and has been ever since the War, all the gold that is needed for business purposes. Specie resumption would scarcely increase its uses, or the demand for it. Paper being equivalent thereto in value, and exchangeable therefor on demand, will be, as it always must be, the most acceptable form of currency for principle, but care everything for the spoils.

We submit these facts, notorious to every man in the least conversant with the manner in which the exchanges of the country are conducted and the trade and commerce carried on, as an answer to the bugaboo which ignorant statesmen, demagogue politicians, and bankrupt speculators raise up whenever special payments are mentioned. The terrible phantom of suspending all business until a thousand millions of gold was collected, in order to resume specie payments, is of course the laughing stock of every informed man, and its presentation on all occasions by editors and statesmen serves to show that even those elevated professions are not free from ignorance and frauds of the most blatant character.

RUSSIA AND THE EASTERN PROBLEM.

A few years ago the Eastern problem was located in Turkey. While the ultimate fate of the serial ladder was made of inferior wood and its construction faulty, and we emphatically condemn the Board of Fire Commissioners for not submitting the latter to both a scientific and practical test before allowing them to be used by the Fire Department. And we most decidedly condemn the officers of the Fire Department for not understanding the use of these aerial ladders now owned by the city by our Fire Department.

These ladders were foisted upon the Fire Department of New York City at a large expense, through the operations of a ring and corruption-money. At the first practical test one of them snapped like a reed and killed the three men who were at work upon it. The disaster will prevent their further use in that city; but the results of it ought not to stop there. Some one should be held responsible for the murder of these men.

THE "JEFFS" AND THE "PEOPLES".

The Jeffersonian Democratic Club of Chicago is in trouble. It is attempting to grapple with the most difficult problem of political science, and that is how to have honest primary elections. The Jeffersonian Club is Democratic, including in its confession of faith all the great fundamental principles of the Republican party. It was organized for the purpose of cultivating pure Democracy. The Jeffs find that this community, instead of being divided, as all other communities are, into two parties,—Democrats and Republicans,—have a Republican party on the one side and a sort of nondescript assembly on the other.

This nondescript assemblage is composed in the proportion of seven parts Democrats and one part of such Republicans as have sought this alliance to get profitable offices. These ex-Republicans, like Buffalo MILLER and A. C. HESSE, are willing to work with the Democrats in consideration of holding offices yielding from $40,000 to $60,000 for a term of two years, but they distinctly and emphatically declare that even at that price they spurn the disgrace of being called Democrats. They offer their contingent of honest men to work with the seven-times-greater body of dyed-in-the-wool Democrats, but insist that there shall be no Democratic party in the matter, and that the allies shall fail to preserve them from conquest.

The last Russian victory has been the subjugation of Khokland. This Khanata, with Kiva, forms the northern half of Turkestan. When Kiva, the westernmost, was first menaced, it was solemnly announced that the province was to be spared to retain complete independence, and that the object of the Russian advance was not military, but commercial and scientific. As soon as this smooth story had lulled English suspicions, the Czar's troops promptly occupied Kiva, which forthwith became a mere appendage of the Russian Empire.

The same story, slightly altered in insignificant detail, applies to Khokland. The seizure of the latter brings Russia very near both Hindostan and China. Different spurts of the same mountain-chain protect the Punjab on the north and Kashgar on the east. The Punjab is one of the richest parts of Hindostan, of which it forms the northwest corner. Kashgar is a semi-independent State, lying between Khokland and China. Its ruler, the Amur, has an Envoy at St. Petersburg pleading for non-interference, but the Amur himself has been accused of hostility to Russia, and it is not probable that this pretext for interference will be neglected. It is an admirable time to attack him, too, for he has left his western frontier exposed for the safety of the eastern boundary. With Kashgar annexed, Russia would find herself face to face with China. Here she may well rest for a time. As the London Times puts it: "The Russians could afford to wait for the accidents which are always abundant in the far East." They would be sure of a rich trade with the Orient. They could strengthen their position by forts and railroads—all by fair dealing with their new subjects—that they would be ready to take advantage of England's becoming involved in a war with some other Power by attacking Hindostan, or of some great revolt in China by pushing their armies into the heart of that vast Empire. "It is a great game that the two Powers play, and every move in it is of interest.

ART IN THE WEST.

It may safely be asserted that the two collections of paintings now on exhibition in Cincinnati and Chicago comprise the majority of the best pictures now in this country. In the Chicago gallery there are 853 pictures, representing about 250 American artists and 10 foreign—in fact, almost every American artist of merit is represented. In this respect the exhibition is unique, and surpasses anything that has ever been accomplished before. The receipts of the elegant Cincinnati catalogue now gives us an opportunity of knowing what the people of that city are enjoying in the way of art. The Cincinnati gallery has been collected with great care and attention to quality than quantity, and the admirable manner in which the catalogue has been compiled and indexed (which, by the way, should furnish our Chicago catalogue-makers some valuable hints) gives the outline of the gallery at a glance. There are 461 paintings, representing 145 American and 142 foreign artists; 324 engravings and etchings; and 277 objects of interest in the household-art collection. The Foreign Department is peculiarly rich, as may be inferred from the following names of some of the world's greatest artists: ACHENBACH (ANDREAS), BOUVEREAU, BUKALOWSKI, BURMEISTER, COON, DE JONGHE, DEL' AQUA, ESCOBAR, FORTUNY, GREUZE, HERZOG, LAMBEAU, MAYER VAN BREMEN, MEERLE, MEYERHEIM, RICHET, SIEZ, SAUNIER, TORCH, ALMA TADEMA, VERNON, FRANCIS, VAN DYCK, WILLIAMS, and ZAMACOIS. Such an array of representative artists as the above is not often found in a Western art-gallery. In addition to its oil-paintings and water-colors, the Cincinnati gallery has a superb collection of engravings and etchings, whereas we have none.

It embraces almost all the celebrated masters of the past three centuries. The works of the great masters of the Renaissance, the Baroque, and the Rococo, are well represented, and the collection is a credit to the city.

The Cincinnati gallery is a credit to the city, and the collection is a credit to the country.

THE SALES OF THE WEEK.

SALESMAN DOES A FAIR BUSINESS.
The sales of real estate in this city reported during the past week make up a considerable aggregate. There is a good deal of inquiry for the different classes of property, particularly productive property and residences. Business shows a decided increase over the sales of speculative time. Due to the season and the fact, and the general situation of finance, it seems as prosperous as could be expected. The principal sales of the week are given below; none of them will command especial attention:

COMPANY ONE, DO YOU DUTY?

Company One, advanced, carrying the rail;

in quick succession they delivered a series of battering-ram blows, which no door could long withstand, and soon forced it from its hinges.

With cold-chisels and sledge-hammers they hewed a path to the cell where the doomed man lay. In about twenty-five minutes from the time when they had burst in the outer door, the leader appeared at the entrance, and announced to the expectant crowd and said:

"WE'RE GOIN' HOME."

and will bring him out and make him confess this and other crimes." The announcement was received by the populace with stern demonstrations of approval, and after a short delay, the company marched off, with their arms.

Emerging from the jail, they took up their line of march back round the Court House. Proceeding to the south corner of the fence, they reached a large tree whose boughs stretched over the wire, and the procession marched stealthily and quickly through the principal street of the town to the Court House.

There they to a halt, and had no act as leader stepped up to the door, kicked it in, and said

"Mr. Shell!" In a voice three times as loud as he could shout, he turned round to the quietly-watching crowd and said:

"DELIBERATELY MURDERED."

COURT-HOUSE STONE.

The Public Officers on a Visit to the Lemont Quarries.

Particular Devotion to the Fluids
—The Places Visited.

General Satisfaction with the Trip.

A few weeks ago the County Board adopted a resolution that the new Court-House should be built of either Cook or Will County stone. Later a resolution was adopted authorizing the Committee on Public Buildings and Public Service to make a tour of inspection of the quarries of the two counties, with a view to ascertain the relative merits of the stone. Still later the Committee received an invitation to visit the quarries of Lemont from the proprietors, and free transportation, etc., was tendered. The invitation was promptly accepted, and was subsequently extended to the entire Board and to the Committee of Public Buildings of the City Council, the Board of Education, the Board of Trade, and other public bodies, and local politicians. Yesterday was fixed as the day for the visit, and at 9 o'clock a party, at the Alton & St. Louis Depot, was well filled with the invited and used.

GRAND LODGE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Grand Lodge of the United States, which yesterday closed its session at Indianapolis, is the organization exercising supreme power and jurisdiction over the Independent Order of Odd-Fellows throughout the world. It is composed of Grand Representatives chosen by the Grand Lodges and Grand Encampments of the several States, Territories, Kingdoms, and Provinces where this Order exists. It is the supreme source of all authority, and all and singular the powers vested in Grand Lodges and subordinate Lodges are obtained by grant from this Supreme Body. When it is remembered how vast is the membership, resources, disbursements, extent, and influence of the Society, it is apparent that this body, exercising supreme judicial as well as legislative control, is potent in its influence upon the civilization of the age. It is but justice to this body, however, to say that its legislation has been eminently wise and conservative. Having granted large and liberal powers to grand bodies, it treats them as vested rights and respects them as sacred.

The present Grand Lodge is largely composed of men of ability and experience, many of whom occupy honorable positions both political and social, in their respective jurisdictions.

THE HON. M. J. DURHAM, of John Wright in the Exposition stands between 12 o'clock and 3 o'clock, and the people who were fed the able remain, however, went away more than satisfied.

It is conducted on a large scale, and capacity for people.

It need not be said that it is in any first-class restaurant, and is moderate.

An army of well-trained attendants and waiters are never absent from the establishment, and the largest in use anywhere, be-pours to the kitchen.
